

ABSTRACT

A measuring device for determining contamination of a surface of a component in an lithographic projection apparatus. The measuring device includes a radiation transmitter for transmitting radiation on at least a part of the surface and a radiation receiver for receiving radiation from the component. A processor is communicatively connected to the receiver, for deriving a property of received radiation and deriving a property of the contamination from the property of received radiation.